

LERCH BATES EXPANDS BUSINESS IN THE KINGDOM OF SAUDI ARABIA

Lerch Bates Inc. has had a presence in the Middle East for many years. With the changing economy Lerch Bates has seen continued growth in its projects base in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia to the point that the Kingdom has now become a significant contributor to the overall revenue base of activity for the entire Middle East region. As one of the oldest and largest consultancy firms in the world in the fields of vertical transportation, façade access, and materials management materials handling we have been involved in projects within the Kingdom for a significant number of years. This includes iconic projects such as the Kingdom Tower and Al Faisaliah Tower. New projects include CMA and Tadawul Towers in King Abdullah Financial District, and other projects that are still in the design phase. Our global expertise includes not only the tall buildings segment, but currently we have projects in hospitality, residential, malls and retail, and healthcare in the east, central, and in the west of the Kingdom. A recently awarded hospital project in Jeddah involved providing our extensive experience to the architectural team on waste management, loading dock design, the supply chain, environmental services amongst other services. Our clients have come to appreciate our integrated service offering of all our international lines of expertise.

As we look into the future, the prospects are strong for an expansion of our work and presence with many developers, architectural firms and project management teams in the Kingdom.
